CreateSpace Independent Publishing Platform. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 268 pages. Dimensions: 10.0in. x 8.0in. x 0.6in..John Hubert earned his B. A. in geology at Harvard (1952), M. S. at the University of Colorado (1954), and Ph. D. at the Pennsylvania State University (1958). Professor Emeritus at the University of Massachusetts, he supervised 58 graduate students and wrote over 60 publications. John writes of his happy marriage of 56 years to Mary Alice. A preschool teacher and field companion away from home for 27 field seasons and four sabbatical leaves, Mary Alice jointly raised their three children and kept the field work moving forward while making it all fun. Their love of nature, travel, and geologic research shines through the anecdotes and adventures in the field, classroom and at home. Born in 1930 to a 20-year-old working mother in the Great Depression who hid being unwed and Portuguese, John revisits the Great Depression, World War II, 1950s, civil rights and womens liberation revolutions of the 1960s, Cold War, and earlier events such as the Dinosaur Bone Wars and the Teapot Dome oil scandal. Johns life illustrates the saying, If you find something you love to do, and give it all youve got, then you will never have to go to work. John is still amazed he was paid to study how the Earth was made and that such a life is possible. John shows how science is an intensely social enterprise, requiring luck at critical moments and hard work. In non-technical language and numerous illustrations, John shows how geologists learn the history of the Earth, illuminating vanished landscapes, seaways and mountains. The reader goes with him and his students exploring sandstones and limestones in ancient terrestrial and marine settings in California, Rocky Mountains, Midwest, New England,...
