Univ Europeenne, United States, 2010. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: French . Brand New Book. De par son accessibilite et la grande diversite des lesions cutanees, la peau represente un domaine d investigation particulierement interessant. Les spectroscopies vibrationnelles sont des techniques non-destructives qui permettent d acceder a des informations d ordre moleculaire et structural de l echantillon etudie. Les etudes spectrales peuvent etre menees a diverses echelles. En effet, nous avons montre le potentiel des spectroscopies infrarouge et Raman pour le diagnostic differentiel melanome (lesion maligne)/naevus (lesion benigne) sur coupes fines. A partir de blocs de peau excisee, l utilisation du Raman a permis d etudier la diffusion de principes actifs a travers la peau. Les valeurs experimentales manquant de precision a cause des phenomenes de refraction des rayons lumineux (laser et Raman), ont pu etre corrigees au moyen de modeles mathematiques qui tiennent compte des particularites optiques de l echantillon et des caracteristiques instrumentales. Au niveau cellulaire, l analyse SERS (Surface Enhanced Raman Scattering) a ete developpe pour etudier la distribution de principe actif au niveau de cellules vivantes, isolees, de type melanocyte.
